A Marion, Mass., delivery driver growing his hair out for charity said he was told by his employer to cut it. Brad Siscoe, a contractor employee who makes deliveries for FedEx Ground, said Monday his employer wants him to cut his hair, put it in a ponytail or tuck it under a hat. But Siscoe said his hair is too short for a ponytail and can't fit in a cap. He is growing his hair for Locks of Love, a group that provides hairpieces for children undergoing medical treatments. Obesity in U.S. Has Hit A Plateau

Chicago

Raise a glass of diet soda: The nation's obesity rate appears to have stalled. But the latest numbers still show that more than two-thirds of adults and almost a third of kids are overweight, with no sign of improvement.

after steadily climbing.

Dr. William Dietz, an obesity expert with the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, cautiously called the results promising. "We're at the corner; we haven't turned the corner," he said.

Not only are the vast majority of adults overweight, but 34 percent are obese, and 17 percent of children are obese.

"Even though this finding is certainly good news, the statistics are still staggering," said Dr. J. Michael Gaziano. LINDSEY TANNER (AP)

U.S. Rushes Aid, Troops to Haiti

President Obama vows massive effort to help quake victims

Washington

President Obama dispatched military troops and an air and sea flotilla to speed earthquake relief to Haiti on Wednesday, and governments from China to Venezuela rushed to help with aid and rescue workers, too.

Obama promised to mount an all-out rescue and humanitarian effort to help the people of Haiti and said the world's help was critical to deal with a "cruel and incomprehensible" tragedy.

U.S. officials were checking reports of at least three deaths of Americans in Haiti. State Department Spokesman P.J. Crowley said few of the estimated 45,000 Americans living in the country had been able to communicate with U.S. officials and verify they were safe and sound.

The United States set in motion a sweeping military response that included ships, helicopters, transport planes and possibly a 2,000-member Marine unit.

Gen. Douglas Fraser, head of U.S. Southern Command, said one of the Navy's large amphibious ships probably would head to Haiti with a Marine expeditionary unit aboard. An Army brigade, which would include several thousand soldiers — from the 82nd Airborne Division based at Fort Bragg, N.C. — was standing by for possible deployment, he said.

The initial contingent of 2,000 Marines could pitch in with both emergency aid distribution and law enforcement in support of a small U.N. peacekeeping force already there, Fraser said. The aircraft carrier USS Carl Vinson also was heading from Norfolk, Va., and should arrive Thursday afternoon.

Obama put newly appointed USAID administrator Rajiv Shah in overall charge of the American effort. He said the initial response would concentrate on search and rescue operations but would also look at longer-term humanitarian needs. Two 72-member American urban search and rescue teams were on their way, transported by military and civilian airlift.

"The goal of the relief effort in the first 72 hours will be very focused on saving lives," Shah told reporters. STEVEN R. HURST (AP)

Banking CEOs Say They're Sorry

Execs admit making bad investments that led to financial crisis

Washington

Challenged by a skeptical special commission, top Wall Street bankers apologized Wednesday for risky behavior that led to the worst financial crisis since the Great Depression. But they still declared it seemed appropriate at the time.

The bankers — whose companies collectively received more than $100 billion in taxpayer assistance to weather the crisis — offered no regrets for executive pay that is now likely to increase as a result of their survival. They did say they are correcting some compensation practices that could lead to excessive risk-taking.

Goldman Sachs Group CEO Lloyd Blankfein testifies Wednesday on Capitol Hill.

The tension at the first hearing of the Financial Crisis Inquiry Commission was evident from the outset.

“People are angry,” commission Chairman Phil Angelides said. Lloyd Blankfein, the chief executive of Goldman Sachs, took the brunt of the questions, especially about his firm’s practice of selling mortgage-backed securities and then betting against them.

“I’m just going to be blunt with you,” Angelides told him. “It sounds to me a little bit like selling a car with faulty brakes and then buying an insurance policy on the buyer of those cars.”

Blankfein replied: “I do think the behavior is improper. We regret the consequence that people have lost money in it.” Later, though, he defended the firm’s actions as “exercises in risk management.” (AP)

House subpoenas N.Y. Federal Reserve in probe of bailouts

Washington

A House committee probing bailout deals has subpoenaed the Federal Reserve Bank of New York for correspondence from Treasury Secretary Timothy Geithner and other officials.

money from the bailout of failed insurer American International Group Inc., according to an earlier watchdog audit.

In a statement Wednesday, committee chairman Rep. Edolphus Towns, D-N.Y., said he had subpoenaed the New York Fed for documents about the decision to pay off AIG's business partners and keep their names secret.

The subpoena demands e-mails, phone logs and meeting notes from Geithner; Stephen Friedman, who succeeded him as New York Fed president; New York Fed general counsel Thomas Baxter; and Sarah Dahlgren, the New York Fed's top manager on AIG.

The subpoena also demands correspondence about the Fed's decision not to name the banks that benefited from the money given to AIG. Federal Reserve officials said releasing the names would make it harder to recoup the money committed to AIG, which totaled $182 billion. DANIEL WAGNER (AP)

U.N.: Afghan Toll Soars

Report finds Taliban attacks caused rise in civilian deaths in '09

Kabul

Taliban suicide bombings and other attacks caused Afghan civilian deaths to soar last year to the highest annual level of the war, a United Nations report found Wednesday, while deaths attributed to allied troops dropped nearly 30 percent. Many Afghans now blame the violence on the Taliban rather than foreign forces.

The United Nations said 2,412 civilians were killed in 2009 — a 14 percent increase over the 2,118 who died in 2008.

NATO and allied Afghan forces were responsible for 25 percent of the deaths, or 596 — down from

The remainder could not be attributed to either side: civilians caught in the crossfire or killed by unexploded ordnance.

More than half the civilian deaths were a result of suicide attacks, and assassinations and executions — despite an order last year by Taliban leader Mullah Mohammed Omar to avoid endangering noncombatants.

A NATO spokesman, Col. Wayne Shanks, credited the military's new restraint for the decline in the number of deaths blamed on pro-government forces.

"We have tried to refocus our efforts in order to protect the civilian population, the Afghan people, because we need their support in order to break the back of the insurgency," he said. KIM GAMEL (AP)

Belgian Receives Successful Windpipe Transplant

London

For more than 2½ years, Linda De Croock lived with constant pain from a car accident that smashed her windpipe.

Today, she has a new one after surgeons implanted the windpipe from a dead man into her arm, where it grew new tissue before being transplanted into her throat. The way doctors trained her body to accept donor tissue could yield new methods of growing organs within patients, experts say.

The technique sounds like science fiction, but De Croock says it has transformed her life. She no longer takes anti-rejection drugs.

De Croock

"Life before my transplant was becoming less livable all the time, with continual pain," the 54-year-old Belgian said.

Doctors at Belgium's University Hospital Leuven implanted the donor windpipe in De Croock's arm as a first step in getting her body to accept the organ and to restart its blood supply.

About 10 months later, when enough tissue had grown around it to let her stop taking the drugs, the windpipe was transferred to its proper place. Details of the case are in Thursday's New England Journal of Medicine.

"This is a major step forward for trachea transplantation," said Dr. Pierre Delaere, the surgeon who led the team that treated De Croock. MARIA CHENG (AP)

Tens of thousands are feared dead as Haitians cope with a stunning tragedy

Port-au-Prince, Haiti

Haitians piled bodies along the devastated streets of their capital Wednesday after a powerful earthquake flattened the president's palace, the cathedral, hospitals, schools, the main prison and whole neighborhoods. Officials feared thousands — perhaps more than 100,000 — may have perished, but there was no firm count.

Death was everywhere in Port-au-Prince. Bodies of tiny children were piled next to schools. Corpses of women lay on the street with stunned expressions frozen on their faces as flies began to gather. Bodies of men were covered with plastic tarps or cotton sheets.

President Rene Preval said he believes thousands were killed in Tuesday afternoon's magnitude-7.0 quake, and the scope of the destruction prompted other officials to give even higher estimates. Leading Sen. Youri Latortue told The Associated Press that 500,000 could be dead, although he acknowledged that nobody really knows.

"Parliament has collapsed. The tax office has collapsed. Schools have collapsed. Hospitals have collapsed," Preval told the Miami Herald. "There are a lot of schools that have a lot of dead people in them."

Even the main prison in the capital fell down, "and there are reports of escaped inmates," U.N. humanitarian spokeswoman Elisabeth Byrs said in Geneva. The U.N.'s 9,000 peacekeepers in Haiti were distracted from aid efforts by their own tragedy: Many spent the night hunting for survivors in the ruins of their headquarters. U.N. peacekeeping chief Alain Le Roy said that at least 14 U.N. personnel were killed and 150 were still unaccounted for, including mission chief Hedi Annabi. The prominent died along with the poor, as the body of Archbishop Joseph Serge Miot, 63, was found in his office. Aftershocks continued to rattle the capital of 2 million people as women covered in dust clawed out of debris, wailing. Stunned people wandered the streets holding hands. Thousands gathered in public squares to sing hymns. People pulled bodies from collapsed homes, covering them with sheets by the side of the road. Passers-by lifted the sheets to see whether loved ones were underneath. The parking lot of the Hotel Villa Creole was a triage center. People sat with injuries and growing infections by the side of rubble-strewn roads, hoping that doctors and aid would come. The international Red Cross said a third of Haiti's 9 million people may need emergency aid and that it would take a day or two for a clear picture of the damage to emerge. "The hospitals cannot handle all these victims," said Dr. Louis-Gerard Gilles. (AP)

Aid Groups Rush Supplies to Haiti

Geneva

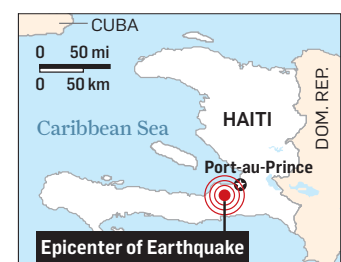

Sniffer dogs, high-energy biscuits and tons of emergency medical aid were sent to Haiti on Wednesday as governments and aid groups launched a massive relief effort for the estimated 3 million people reeling from a devastating earthquake.

Aid officials in the impoverished Caribbean nation worked to clear rubble from roads, build makeshift hospitals and remove bodies from the rubble despite transportation problems and broken phone lines.

As it struggled to gauge the full scale of the catastrophe, the U.N. said it was rushing aid to alleviate the “major humanitarian emergency.”

The sheer number of dead bodies was expected to pose a problem. The World Health Organization said it has sent specialists to help clear the city of corpses and prevent the spread of disease. The Red Cross was sending a plane Thursday loaded mainly with body bags. (AP)

History of Suffering

Even before Tuesday's quake, Haiti had seen more than its share of misery. Since its foundation in 1804, Haiti has endured endemic instability, murderous dictators, more than 30 coups and seemingly endless natural disasters. U.N. peacekeepers have been deployed in the 28,000-square-kilometer country of more than 9 million people since 2004, when a bloody rebellion ousted Haiti's first democratically elected president. Despite recent optimism for improvements in Haiti's economy, 80 percent of Haitians still live below the poverty line, according to the CIA World Factbook. (EXPRESS/AP)

For Area Haitians It's Wait, Worry

Community members try in vain to contact kin, friends at home

Silver Spring, Md.

The news that got through, spotty and sparse in detail, seemed too enormous to comprehend.

Port au Prince's main cathedral had collapsed in a devastating earthquake. So had the presidential palace. The biggest grocery store in Haiti was flattened at an hour when it would have been full of shoppers.

When word of loved ones seeped through, it was often grim.

"A friend called; her mom was stuck in the rubble [and] died," said Arielle Jean-Baptiste, 50, of Silver Spring, who managed to receive text and Facebook messages from friends in Haiti early Wednesday morning.

But by midday, the trickle of information dried up. Similar stories of distress and uncertainty were told throughout the region and the country as anxious Haitian Americans desperately sought to learn whether relatives and friends had survived the 7.0-magnitude quake that struck Haiti on Tuesday afternoon.

From a distance of 1,400 miles, not knowing was excruciating.

"Crying, that's all we can do," said Nellie Joseph, 66. "We love Port au Prince; we love the capital."

A cabdriver who lives in Silver Spring, Joseph said she has been trying to reach relatives in Haiti since she learned of the quake.

"I just can't contact nobody," she said. "It just rings and hangs up. I have my cousins, my nieces, my brothers, uncle, aunt. I don't hear anything. I just follow CNN."

Circulator May Add Va. Route

Washington

A D.C. Council committee has voted to expand city-funded Circulator bus service into Arlington but rejected a proposal to start a new route serving Southeast Washington.

The legislation calls for the Circulator to take over the route served by the Georgetown Metro Connection bus, which runs among Dupont Circle, Georgetown and the Rosslyn Metro station in Virginia. The bill that passed 4-1 Tuesday now moves to the full council.

Councilman Kwame Brown objected to allowing the bus to cross the Potomac River to Virginia if service was not also provided to D.C. residents east of the Anacostia River. He proposed a route between Union Station and Southeast Washington.

Others said they need more data on ridership and costs before expanding the service further. (AP)

Vols AD Disappointed About Kiffin’s Quick Exit

Tennessee athletic director Mike Hamilton says he can describe Lane Kiffin’s tenure coaching the Volunteers in one word: “brief.” The athletic director says Kiffin — who resigned after 14 months to take over at Southern California — told him Saturday if the USC job became available, he would be interested. Hamilton also says he’s disappointed after giving Kiffin a chance to be a head coach. (AP)

Bugel — who turned offensive linemen into stars — retires

The Redskins

Joe Bugel gave the Washington Redskins a unique identity.

For much of the NFL’s history, offensive linemen were the league’s ho-hum, anonymous, oversized worker bees. Then, one day back in the 1980s, Bugel started calling his guys “the Hogs.”

The Boss Hog himself retired Wednesday after 32 NFL seasons — including serving as head coach in Arizona and Oakland. It was an event worthy of a grand, emotional news conference in the Redskins’ auditorium.

Eight of Bugel’s former players were on hand, and one of the “Hogettes” — that’s right, one of those male Redskins fans who dress in women’s clothes and pig snouts. The guest of honor gave a

Redskins Freeze Ticket Prices

General admission ticket prices for the 2010 season will remain unchanged, the Redskins announced Wednesday. “It’s always a challenge to maintain ticket prices from year to year, but we wanted to show the fans how much we appreciate their support, especially in difficult economic times,” David Donovan, the team’s chief operating officer, said in a statement released by the team. (TWP)

10-minute speech without notes that could make even the most sedate couch potato want to get up and play for him.

“Never be ashamed,” said Bugel, leaving the podium behind and walking to the center of the stage, “to look somebody in the face and tell them you love them.”

Bugel said it’s “tough to walk away” and that he was asked to stay by new coach Mike Shanahan, but Bugel turns 70 in March and is ready to spend time with his family.

Linemen everywhere are glad he came along. As the Redskins offensive line coach from 1981 to 1989, Bugel improbably made his players into league-wide stars.

Russ Grimm, Joe Jacoby, Mark May, Jeff Bostic, George Starke and others were a dominant force — although none has made the Hall of Fame. Washington won two of its three Super Bowl titles while Bugel was on coach Joe Gibbs’ staff.

“It changed how people look at football,” Starke said of Bugel’s influence. “So, now everybody knows you’ve got to have a good offensive line.” JOSEPH WHITE (AP)

Samuels Undecided On His Retirement

Redskins offensive tackle Chris Samuels said Wednesday he still has not made a final decision about whether to retire because of neck problems that cost him all but five games of the 2009 season. Samuels said he would have another checkup in three or four weeks and make a decision shortly thereafter. “I want to play,” Samuels said at the retirement press conference for offensive line coach Joe Bugel. “I love to play the game. But at this point, my health is first.” (TWP)

Freeman Powers Hoyas

Hoyas Hoops

Never known for touting one of his players over another, Georgetown coach John Thompson tried his best to understate how impressive junior guard Austin Freeman's career-high 33 points were in the Hoyas' come-from-behind 72-69 victory over No. 13 Connecticut last Saturday afternoon at Verizon Center.

Thompson, an advocate of the Princeton offense, has said all season that No. 12 Georgetown and the 12-2 record it sports heading into Thursday's matchup against Seton Hall and Big East scoring leader Jeremy Hazell (23.3 points per game) has more to do with the unselfish nature of these Hoyas than the scoring exploits of one player. But after Freeman scored 28 points in the second half — more points than he had ever scored in a college game and just one point less than Connecticut had as a team after halftime — even his coach couldn't help but throw a little praise to his emerging forward.

"I was glad [Freeman] was playing for us; he was rolling," said Thompson with a hint of a smile after Georgetown overcame a 19-point deficit.

Over his last four games, all

A New Big Three

With Wizards guard Gilbert Arenas suspended indefinitely, Freeman, a product of local basketball power DeMatha, has joined fellow junior Chris Wright (St. John's) and sophomore Greg Monroe to form Verizon Center's new Big Three. One of them has led the Hoyas in scoring in all but three games this year. (ME) against conference opponents, Freeman is averaging more than 21 points to up his season average to 15.4 points per contest. During that time, he has shot 11-of-19 from 3-point range, but what's impressed Thompson the most is his ability to get open looks within the flow of the offense and a newfound penchant for drawing contact.

As a result, Connecticut coach Jim Calhoun called Freeman "a bona fide, terrific big-time player." Perhaps Freeman is worthy of the praise, yet it's a sentiment that the guard, like his coach, was reluctant to embrace. "My team got me open and [Connecticut] left me open, so I took the shot," said the ever-modest Freeman. MARK GIANNOTTO

United Steps Up Youth Movement

Major League Soccer

D.C. United heads into Thursday's MLS draft with a few key decisions already taken care of but several more still on its plate, including who to select with the seventh overall pick.

The overhaul of a club that has missed the playoffs for two-straight years seems to be about halfway complete as the March 27 opener approaches. A new coach, Curt Onalfo, is in place, along with a staff that features former United players Ben Olsen and Kris Kelderman. The roster will be younger, thanks to Olsen's retirement and the departure of former league MVP Lucia no Emilio, whose return to Brazil will free up a significant chunk of salary cap space. Playmaker Christian Gomez may leave the team, too. D.C. did not renew the option on his contract but could re-sign him at a reduced salary.

"We want to give a bigger role to some of the younger guys," GM Dave Kasper said. "It's time for them to step up and make their mark."

Two of those players were taken in the 2009 draft: former Maryland defender/midfielder Rodney Wallace and forward Chris Pontius, who's in camp with the U.S. national team. This year's draft in Philadelphia is not considered as deep as last year's, but there is promising talent on offer. "We are looking for the best player available," Kasper said. D.C.'s second selection is the 55th overall pick.

United's midfield, with Santino Quaranta, Clyde Simms and Fred returning, appears to be in decent shape. The most pressing needs are in back, where the situations in central defense and goal remain unsettled.

As for pursuing a high-salaried designated player to replace Emilio, Kasper said United plans to wait until at least the summer. "It's something we're always looking at," he said, "but it's something we'll more likely put off until the future." BRIAN STRAUS

While many authors write about topics they know something about, Tracy Chevalier chooses to write about what she doesn't. Chevalier, whose 1999 book "Girl With a Pearl Earring" established her reputation as a historical fiction writer, is back with her sixth novel, "Remarkable Creatures," about two women who search for fossils in England in the 19th century. Chevalier, who lived in Takoma and Bethesda until she was 18, discusses her work on Thursday night as part of Smithsonian's Educational and Cultural Programs.

What made you decide to tell the story of Mary Anning, a woman who collected fossils on an English beach?
I was interested in telling her story since I was surprised at how young she was when she made some of her discoveries. She was only 12 when she found the first complete specimen of an ichthyosaur. She was an uneducated, working-class girl who did things on instinct and had a good eye for finding things. ... Also, she was struck by lightning and survived. Accounts at the time said she had been very sickly and lethargic before and after she became lively and intelligent.

How did you find her story?
I was at the dinosaur museum in Dorchester with my son, and there was a display about her. I had never heard of her before I saw the display.

Were fossils something you were interested in?
No, which is why it was so surprising for me that I had this idea. Fossils aren't something I would normally have gravitated toward, until I went to the dinosaur museum with my son, who was going through a dinosaur phase. Once I had a human face to put to the science, it made the science more interesting.

Have you ever been fossil hunting yourself?

I've gone on the beach at Lyme Regis where Mary Anning used to go fossil hunting. A lot of people still do it.

What do you enjoy about writing historical fiction?
I'm attracted to it because it gets me away from my contemporary life. I feel like I live it, so I don't need to write about it, and it's more interesting to write about things I don't know.

What's your research process for a new novel?
I live right near the British Library, and for this book I also went to the Natural History Museum Library in London. I also went to the museum in Lyme Regis itself, which had archives. AMY CAVANAUGH

Family secrets and dysfunction, meditations on race and class, and handy information about bugs: Arena Stage's latest is packed with fodder for discussion. Oh, and it's extremely funny.

Lydia Diamond's "Stick Fly," currently at Arena in Crystal City, follows the LeVays, an upper-class African-American family whose members reunite for a summer weekend at Martha's Vineyard.

Director Kenny Leon discussed the play's intricacies via telephone. "This play is very hard to do. Most people don't know that there is a black upper class," he said. "Lydia has taken upper-class black folks and has made them very human."

Chaos ensues when one son, Kent (Jason Dirden), brings his brilliant but brash entomologist fiancée, Taylor (Nikkole Salter), and the other son, Flip (Billy Eugene Jones), brings his WASPy new girlfriend Kimber, (Rosie Benton). Meanwhile, the ailing family housekeeper sends her teen daughter Cheryl (Amber Iman) in her stead with instructions to query the clan's patriarch.

Said patriarch, Joseph (Wendell W. Wright), arrives without Mom, one of several "mysteries" that are telegraphed early, but that's not the point. The play's enjoyment comes from watching the characters as they make their discoveries.

The polished and professional cast tackles Diamond's crackling dialogue and awkward silences with humor and poignancy.

If the audience leaves with any sort of message, it's one of forgiveness. "It's important to embrace the memories of the time with our loved ones," Leon said. "And no one is perfect." ERIN TROMPETER

With the Gaslight Anthem, Fallon writes and sings tales that draw upon America's myths of itself—equally tough and tender.

Middle Class Hero

Brian Fallon's New Jersey upbringing prepared him for a career in punk rock

Music

Brian Fallon didn't need a hard-scrabble childhood or harrowing stories to prepare him for the role of heading New Jersey's thinky punkers the Gaslight Anthem—the band whose 2009 involved selling out clubs, packing festivals and sharing the stage with their own fairy godfather, Bruce Springsteen—but the 29-year-old singer has channeled years of hard work and the support of family and friends into a class-transcending lyrical voice and the backbone of the group's third album, slated to be released on June 15.

"We're calling the record 'American Slang'; that's the best description of us," said Fallon.

"It's kind of like this offhanded backstory that no one gets to see. It's not popular stories—we came from regular things, not extremely bad, not extremely good. ... None of us were, like, really, really broke. I never feel like any of us had it worse than anyone else."

Fallon's parents split before he was born. While his grandmother hovered, he was raised by his mother, Deborah—a former folk singer-turned-hospital publicist who greeted the first of Fallon's elaborate tattoos with, "At least you're not on drugs"—and his stepfather, Gary, a Nestle factory worker.

The two pushed Brian toward an instrument and, after a teacher showed Brian how to play Guns N' Roses' "Used to Love Her," the 11-year-old was hooked.

"I was like, 'Ohhhh,'" said Fallon, laughing. "I wanted to learn the chords of how the song was played, and then I would try to write these songs that were about things that I knew absolutely nothing."

Ever the good boy, after graduating from high school with "upper side of average" grades, Fallon's plans, to forego college and join a band, found support from his stepfather.

"He's been there the whole time," said Fallon. "He's just that kind of guy, a real blue-collar guy, and it's unusual for a guy like that ican ears.

And the success wasn't taken lightly.

"It makes it more focused and sensible," said Fallon. "Most of us are married or have longtime girlfriends, and we have our own places. We're not interested in the party; we're doing it because we love it, and we're doing it to prove a point. We have something to say here."

Fallon and the Clash-loving quartet earned high praise for 2008's "59 Sound," mixing Amer-to support an artistic type of thing. Right off the bat, he was like, 'You don't want to do what I do; you should pursue this, and, in the worst case, if you fail, the factory is waiting for you.'"

And the Jersey family followed suit.

"When you're a musician, a lot of time people help you out; they take pity on you," said Fallon. "Family members will kind of come around and are like, 'Listen, I bought you a bunch of groceries because I know that you're a screwup.'"

Still, success didn't come easy for Fallon, or for any of the members of Gaslight Anthem, who spent their time playing shows with different bands and working odd jobs.

"Nothing really panned out," said Fallon. "When you start getting into 25, you're like, 'Aw, I haven't really done anything with this.' ... Finally, we were like, 'You know, you're like the only guys in town we haven't done a band with; maybe we should start a new band.'"

The Gaslight Anthem expressed its last-ditch, all-in sense of desperation in its debut album title, but 2007's "Sink or Swim" quickly won over European and Americana-rooted stories—deathbeds and a girl named Maria, old cars and white T-shirts—with hard-driving hooks and fist-pumping choruses. They're familiar images, borrowed from the libraries of classic songwriters and universally translatable.

Or, this is how the Gaslight Anthem used to sound.

"I've kind of abandoned all of that," said Fallon. "There are no names and none of the old stuff. I feel like I've said a lot of what I had to say about that old stuff. I'm moving on. ... ['American Slang'] is a hyper-literal album. These stories are coming out of my life and the reflections on the things I've gotten as I've gotten older. It's more autobiographical, definitely more direct. Not so shrouded in mystery. I'm not trying to confuse anyone with a trail of images on this one."

"I think I have a better focus on what to say to people. Now, I have a reason to tell people things, instead of crying on someone's shoulder. I just kind of got ahead on it [life], and I know where it's going."

We like the Movits! Movits! "Sweden's innovative trio blend unlikely genres to create a surprisingly accessible sound."

Swingin' Gangstas

Sweden's Movits! combine big-band music with hip-hop beats — and it works

Music

Lulea, Sweden, has given us Nordstrom and Bond girl Maud Adams, but who knew they also had hip-hop swing jazz? Someone at "The Colbert Report," it turns out.

"They found our YouTube video at a Reddit.com forum," explains Movits! singer/rapper Johan Rensfeldt, "and gave us a call asking if we would like to drop by. Yeah, of course!"

Thanks to that video and last July's Colbert performance of "Fel Del Av Garden," the trio are bringing their saxophone, banjo and turntables to the U.S. for the first time, though unless a few Swedish Embassy staffers show up, the Iota crowd isn't likely to be chanting along.

Fortunately, lyrical flow transcends language barriers, and even ignoring its references to "mr. tam-burin man" and "Sucker MC's," the Movits! album "Appelknyckarjazz" is upfront about its U.S. roots. Rensfeldt and his brother Anders had been doing acoustic hip-hop until they heard Benny Goodman's "Sing, Sing, Sing" at a party and decided to combine the sounds.

"Having jazz samples in hip-hop is quite common, but never that big band style, at least from what I'd heard," Rensfeldt says.

They got a drummer friend to "play same Gene Krupa-style grooves, and that's the starting point of the CD." The opener, "Ta Pa Dig Dansskorna" ("put on your dancing shoes"), does set the mood with its Krupa rhythms and the following track "Lite Som ..." even name-checks Goodman. But it's the album's title track that borrows the "Sing" beat wholesale. The CD's highlight is the closer, "Vals Pa

Enduring Elvis

The King lives in art at the National Portrait Gallery

Museum

Elvis Presley's 75th birthday was last week, and to mark the occasion, the National Portrait Gallery is honoring the rocker with an exhibit in its One Life gallery. "One Life: Echoes of Elvis," is a small but focused exhibit on Elvis' life and explores the way his image has evolved since his death in 1977.

Paintings, photographs and sculptures by artists like William Eggleston and Red Grooms help illustrate Elvis' impact on America, as well as his enduring influence. A 1978 sculpture of Elvis as Julius Caesar by Robert Carston Arneson overlooks the room, and books published in the last 10 years, including "The Tao of Elvis" and "E is for Elvis: The Elvis Presley Alphabet," are on display to show the wide-ranging interest in his life.

Klein updated her best-selling 1999 book to assess the Obama presidency so far.

Corporate Greed In the Crosshairs

Author Naomi Klein re-releases her seminal ‘No Logo’ with a new mission

Pages

Naomi Klein 1999's book “No Logo” brought attention to a groundswell of activism that culminated at the protest against the World Trade Organization in Seattle that year. Now, Klein — who also wrote the best-selling “The Shock Doctrine” — is re-releasing “No Logo” with a new introduction which focuses on how President Obama has crafted his political message into a powerful brand.

When you started working on “No Logo,” what was your intent?

It seemed to make sense to me that we were in an age where corporations were growing more popular than governments and that the response would be a movement focused on corporations more than governments, and I just started writing about it. And when I was doing the research, people would say, “What are you talking about? There is no anti-corporate activism.”

Can you describe the importance of the Obama brand?

Obviously, Obama supporters were fighting for him to be president, but ... it was memories of a revolution, not an actual revolution. ... That's why I think progressives who did support Obama are in a very confused state right now, because they don't actually have a right to feel deeply betrayed by Obama because his promises were so actually empty. ... He didn't make promises that he can be held to.

So what should people do?

I saw [a shift] happening really clearly among the young people in Copenhagen. They're not driven by partisan ideology; they're not driven by a deep love of the Democratic Party — they're driven by a concern about the issues. They thought that electing Obama was that ticket, but it wasn't, so I think there will be a back-to-basics. ROXANA HADADI

All the Lonely Swedish People

Roy Andersson depicts life as absurd in the tragicomic film 'You, the Living'

DVD

If you're looking for a quick pick-me up, look somewhere else. Roy Andersson's tragicomedy "You, the Living" is only humorous in the darkest, bleakest of ways. But if cinema helps you feel less alone, if you want to know you're not the only one struggling through what sometimes seems like a dreary, difficult existence, then perhaps you should put this strange and extraordinarily unique film in your Netflix queue.

The film is made up of 50 seamlessly interwoven sketches acted out by mostly non-professional actors, many of whom sport disconcertingly pale makeup. The various main characters — an overweight alcoholic, a heartbroken groupie, and a financially strained tuba player among others — all feel isolated and misunderstood. They can't seem to meaningfully connect with anyone.

Of course, when all these characters' lives bump into one another, it becomes clear how alone they are not. That's certainly part of the humor, and it's also part of the film's existential exploration.

Visually, the film is subtle and impeccable. Andersson conveys so much emotion with the masterful placement of his characters within the shot that the dialogue simply becomes a natural extension of the scene. Considering the fact that most of the scenes were filmed in one take and with one shot, setting them up properly was crucial to the film's success.

The DVD's special features are worth noting. While most behind-the-scenes extras are tiring at best, Andersson's use of old-school visual trickery rather than digital effects is actually quite remarkable. The great care that Andersson took to establish the aesthetics of every scene made for a much more real, human film.

While the movie is about sad people living sad lives, it both sympathizes with the characters and gently mocks the absurdity of their situations. As long as you can appreciate both of those aspects, it's surprisingly good-natured for a black comedy. RYAN LITTLE

Have It Her Way at Ris

Chef Ris Lacoste is back in the kitchen after four years, this time on her own turf

Returns

D.C.'s West End — defined by P Street to the north, Pennsylvania Avenue to the south, 22nd Street to the east and Rock Creek Park to the west — occupies very little land in the city. But with the addition of the new restaurant Ris, and already delicious meal-producing neighbors Westend Bistro by Eric Ripert and Blue Duck Tavern, this tiny area demands attention.

After four years, chef and owner Ris Lacoste is back in the kitchen. For a decade, Lacoste cooked at 1789, a proper Georgetown establishment known for equal parts rack of lamb and engagement proposals. Fortunately, Lacoste's rack of lamb can now be found on Thursday, a night she deems "sophisticated diner night." The proposals, however, will probably cease in this windowed, light and gracefully cozy restaurant.

The rest of the days also feature specials: part ode to Americana blue plates (Monday is meatloaf and Friday is Lent-approved fish), and part personal affection (Tuesday is Parisian-themed, honoring Lacoste's classical French training, and Wednesday is "Little Italy" in tribute to her Boston hometown's red-sauced nights.)

Weekends are also in on the fun with a Saturday steak-and-potatoes "Date Night." Lacoste wanted to give patrons a meal "worthy of a date, but not too complex." Sunday rounds out the week with a family-style meal. While the theme remains the same each week, the dishes will change with seasonality and availability.

The daily rotation lets Lacoste see what her regulars are coming in for: "I don't want to disappoint," she assures, "but some things you

PLAYFUL PLATTERS: From "sophisticated diner night" on Thursday, when patrons can order chef Ris Lacoste's elegant rack of lamb, to steak-and-potatoes "Date Night" on Saturday, the newly opened Ris serves up high-class dishes in a relaxing atmosphere.

Taking advantage of the West End's well-populated office and apartment buildings, Ris caters to businesses and neighbors. Ris maintains two private rooms, the Federal Room and State Room, each curated by local gallery owner Laurie Adamson of Adamson Gallery.

The Federal Room is set with a drop-down projection screen with AV systems: perfect for both rehearsal dinners and board meetings. For the locals, there's a to-go operation, which is especially nice for the affordable lunchtime chicken salad sandwich and portabella mushroom reuben.

get to play with."

The rest of the menu reflects the same dedication to both American and global tastes. A cheeseburger and chicken pot pie share the dining room with an Asian-outfitted salmon with stylings of soy, gingered beets, pickled mushrooms and bok choy.

But don't dive directly into the entrees. Lovely lumps of local Blue Ridge Dairy ricotta — gnudi — feel plush yet light. The cheese pillows are poached, pan seared in oil and herbs, and sit atop a thick tomato and eggplant "fondue."

Vegetarians will be happy to know that the boss also finds time to perfect a meatless dish. In fact, Lacoste admits, "there aren't enough vegetarian dishes on the menu to satisfy me."

The porcini powder-enhanced noodles are made in-house for the mushroom pappardelle, also starring butternut squash, roasted chestnuts and Brussels sprout leaves in a mascarpone mushroom cream.

Owners of Paradise Springs Jane Kincheloe and Kirk Wiles survey their land.

One Man's Paradise, an Entire County's Dilemma

Claiming victory in a legal battle that's lasted more than a year, Paradise Springs Winery will finally become Fairfax County's first winery when it opens to the public this Saturday.

Mother-and-son owners Jane Kincheloe and Kirk Wiles cut the ribbon last week from their historic log-cabin-turned-winery in the quaint town of Clifton, Va. The cabin, originally built in the 1800s, is surrounded by 37 acres of farmland. That land was given to the Wilesees' ancestors in 1716 as part of a land grant from Lord Fairfax. They considered selling the property but decided to "give new life to the place," according to Kincheloe.

While the Virginia wine industry welcomes Paradise Springs, not everyone is so pleased. Fairfax County officials first denied construction requests due to zoning concerns; neighbors fear the winery will attract noise and traffic; and, the Occoquan Watershed Coalition worries about environmental consequences. For local wine lovers, though, a winery just 40 minutes outside D.C. is a locavore score.

The swank Mandarin Oriental Hotel relaxes a bit with its casual Sou'Wester, which specializes in comforting American classics.

Home, Tasty Home

Mandarin Oriental's Sou'Wester borrows from the region for its cozy American menu

In With the Wind

The Mandarin Oriental Hotel always gets a lot of buzz for its excellent restaurant CityZen, but new, more casual concept Sou'Wester has been getting plenty of ink since it opened in September.

The meaning behind the restaurant's name is twofold. The restaurant is in Southwest D.C., and "sou'wester" means strong winds from the southwest. As chef de cuisine Rachael Harriman explains, "It's like a nor'easter, but it comes in from the southwest. It's something coming in that's going to change things."

Changing things is the plan for Sou'Wester, which is a replacement for Asian-inspired Café MoZU. The restaurant has a warm, earthy feel, like you just stopped by a farm and were invited in for dinner.

CityZen executive chef Eric Ziebold, a James Beard Award winner, headlines Sou'Wester, but Harriman executes the American comfort dishes. The two chefs worked together for three years at CityZen, and before that at the French Laundry in California and Per Se in New York.

"Sou'Wester offers American comfort food inspired by the region," Harriman said. "So, we try to take things from Maryland all the way down to North Carolina, like hush puppies."

The restaurant serves both lunch and dinner. Midday, look for cured shoat leg and cheese Panini and Harriman's specialty, the fried chicken sandwich.

“Sou'wester offers American comfort food inspired by the region... from Maryland ... down to North Carolina.”

Dinner includes a creamy poached egg, grits and sweetbreads starter, and for entrees, check out the fried chicken and the chicken and dumplings.

Those hush puppies, served with honey butter, are a must-order. Also notable are sommelier Carlton McCoy's cocktails, such as his root beer float made with Jack Daniel's, vanilla bean, bitters and soda. There's also a great happy hour — cocktails usually run about $10 apiece, but daily from 3 to 5 p.m., they're giving 'em away at $7. AMY CAVANAUGH

About Student Loans

Qualifying for Income-Based Repayment

Q Dear American Student Assistance:

How do I find out if I'm eligible for income-based repayment? If I am eligible, how much will my monthly student loan payments be reduced?

Thank you,

Carla

E-mail us with your student loan questions at askasa@amsa.com

A Dear Carla:

Income-based repayment (IBR) could reduce your monthly payments if you have high federal student loan debt and a low income.

To find out if you qualify, contact your loan holder (the company you make loan payments to). They will determine eligibility based on your federal student loan debt, income, and family size. You will need to tell them your income from last year as shown on your W-2 form. If your loan payments exceed 15 percent of your discretionary income, you are likely eligible for IBR. If this is the case, your loan holder can provide you with an IBR application form.

Please note: Parent PLUS loans, Perkins loans, private loans, and any loans in default are ineligible for IBR. For more information about IBR—including a payment calculator—visit www.amsa.com.

Regards,

American Student Assistance

Must-Seek TV

Falling in love with a doomed show is like crushing on a movie star. You know you have no future. And you're not really sure where to find your beloved. And so, I search for "Better Off Ted" each night, as ABC burns off episodes in unexpected slots.

Why do I adore Ted? Because it is like a sitcom written by Eugene Ionesco and because Portia de Rossi, above, plays the bossiest bossiest boss ever. With her power bun and iron hand, she runs a scientific research lab, tossing out pronouncements that capture what is wrong with CEOs — not to mention politicians and news commentators. To wit: "Facts are just opinions, and opinions can be wrong." Or "I heard what you said, but it bothered me, so I changed it."

By Marc Silver

A mere 3.3 million people are faithful "Ted" watchers. Maybe the masses are put off by the weirdly flat rhythm or the absurdist bent — like when a eulogist for a fallen worker observes: "He was a complex man. He liked coffee but didn't like having coffee thrown at him." Or maybe viewers just can't find "Ted." For January, try Tuesdays at 8:30 and 9:30 p.m. After that, two more episodes will air sometime. Then, "Ted" might be, sob, dead.

Experience Jimi Hendrix

Tracks from the late, great ax man surface to mark 40 years since his passing

Music

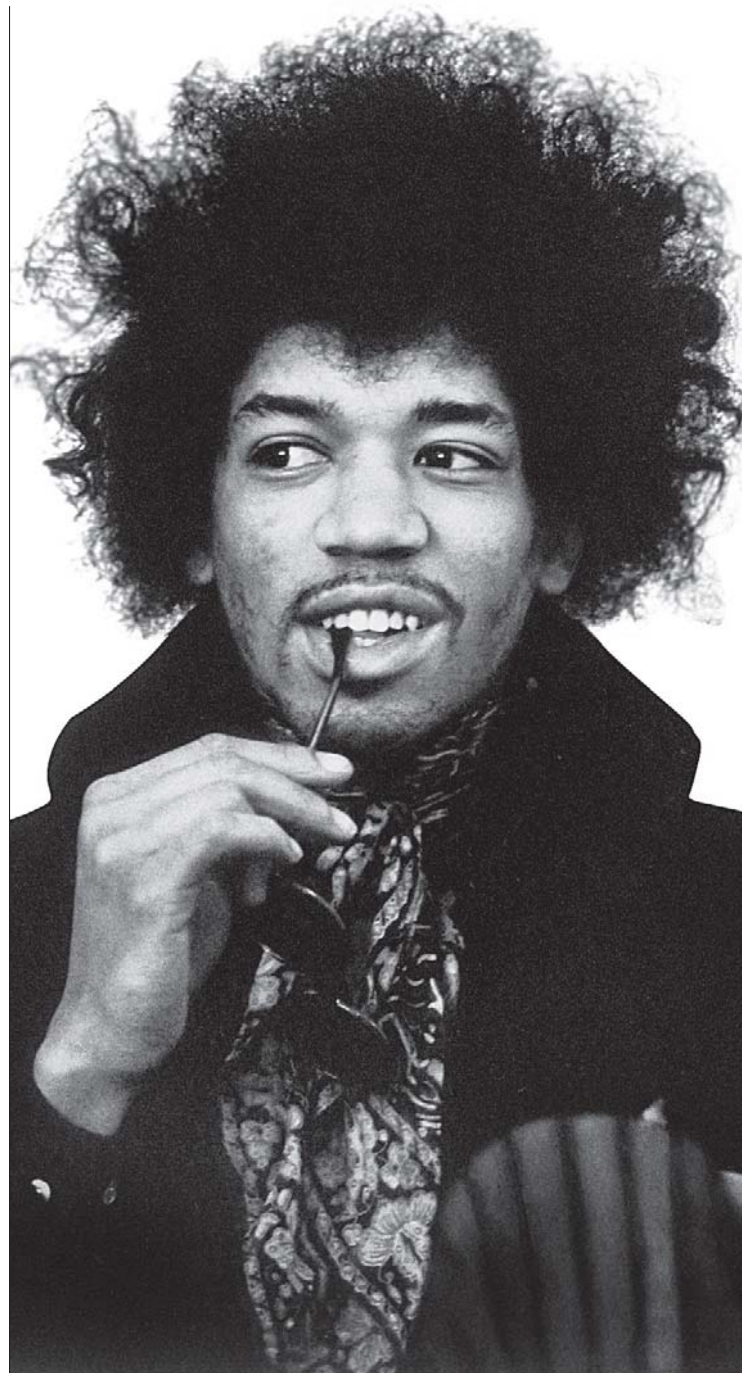

An album of previously unreleased Jimi Hendrix studio recordings is set for release in March, kicking off a brand-new exploration of the legendary guitar virtuoso's life and works in the lead-up to the 40th anniversary of his death in 1970.

"Valleys of Neptune," a 12-song collection that includes the final studio sessions of the original Jimi Hendrix Experience lineup and Hendrix's first recordings with bassist Billy Cox, is set for release on March 9 on Sony's Legacy Recordings. The album marks the launch of the 2010 Jimi Hendrix Catalog Project, a partnership between the label and Experience Hendrix LLC, the company charged with overseeing the guitarist's music and image.

Taken mostly from several 1969 sessions, "Valleys of Neptune" was originally recorded and newly mixed by Eddie Kramer, the Electric Ladyland studio engineer who worked closely with Hendrix.

The title track, much craved by Hendrix devotees, delivers on the promise of the musician's legendary trove of unreleased material: a fully realized song written and recorded by Hendrix at his creative peak in 1970. The song will be released as a single globally on Feb. 2.

Tribute Concert

If you want to celebrate the guitarist in person, the 17-date Experience Jimi Hendrix Tour 2010 kicks off March 4 in California. This is the tour's fourth outing and will feature Joe Satriani, Aerosmith's Brad Whitford, Jonny Lang, Kenny Wayne Shepard, Ernie Isley, Los Lobos and Living Colour, among others. Billy Cox, Hendrix's Army buddy who played bass in the Band of Gypsies and at the Woodstock and Isle of Wight festivals, will perform at all of the dates. (D.J.P.)

include the only JHE studio recording of "Hear My Train A Comin'," a Hendrix blues original that he often performed live; a searing instrumental take on Cream's "Sunshine of Your Love"; the extended stage arrangements of JHE classics "Fire" and "Red House"; and "Mr. Bad Luck," one of the only original tunes the then-unknown guitarist performed in tiny Greenwich Village nightclubs in 1966.

"It is important that everyone understand that this is not the 'lost' album," explains Experience Hendrix archivist John McDermott, who wrote extensive liner notes for the release. "It is the documentation of an important point in his career."

Hendrix died Sept. 18, 1970 at 27, having released only four albums and a few singles. DAVID J. PRINCE (BILLBOARD.COM)

The End Is Near and Non-Negotiable

The 'Lost' producers have no doubts about the show's finale

Television

When ABC's drama "Lost" ends in May, it will definitively end — don't look for any sequels or spin-offs. The show's producers said Tuesday they've known the final image of the mythologically dense series about Oceanic Airlines Flight 815 since the first season, although Carlton Cuse said the last episode hasn't been written yet. It will air sometime in May. Cuse and Damon Lindelof were giving away few secrets to the show's rabid fans at a news conference Tuesday, even refraining from showing video clips. The producers were initially sweating about their two-hour season opener, scheduled for

Where "Lost's" finale will find Jack and his fellow castaways is anyone's guess.

Feb. 2, when they heard President Obama had been considering that night for his State of the Union address. It promises to be a challenging episode; actress Emilie de Ravin said she had to read the script three times before it made any sense. "Get ready to scratch your heads, America," Lindelof said. A one-hour recap special, an attempt to get uninitiated or casual viewers as familiar with the story as possible, will precede the opener. In its lifetime, "Lost" proved that it's possible for a television series to challenge its viewers and pull off production values that rival feature films, said Stephen McPherson, ABC entertainment president. "It will arguably be one of the most influential shows of the decade, if not of all time," McPherson said. DAVID BAUDER (AP)

OK Go keeps on top of its quirky rep and also grows musically

CD Review

When you have as much YouTube exposure and mass pop-rock appeal as OK Go, there's bound to be some backlash from people who want to spoil everyone else's fun. But even in the infamously vitriolic YouTube comments section, there's hardly any anti-OK Go sentiment to be found in the video that made the band famous: "Here It Goes Again". With $5 and a camcorder, the band put out what is still among the top 35 most-viewed videos of all time, slightly ahead of the sneezing baby panda but still behind "Charlie bit my finger — again!"

OK Go is emerging as a sophisticated rock band for nostalgic grown-ups and for club-going youngsters.

According to frontman Damian Kulash, the band's philosophy revolves around being "DIY in a post-major label world" and "having good ideas and making cool stuff." And their fans haven't yet tired of their whimsical/art/geeky music, videos and other cool stuff.

It's been four years since OK Go's last album. In the interim, the band has been touring extensively and participating in projects such as fundraising for Hurricane Katrina victims and doing a song for "Twilight" called "Shooting the Moon."

The name of the new album, "Of the Blue Colour of the Sky," comes from a book called "The Influence of the Blue Ray of the Sunlight and of the Blue Color of the Sky," about how illness can be cured by blue light. And it's pretty obvious what else the band has been doing for the last four years, because blue sky seems closely related to purple rain: "Blue Colour" is obviously heavily inspired by Prince. But even though OK Go may have had the Purple One on repeat in the recording studio, it's not a straight-up homage — there are still plenty of OK Go's mod-rock sensibilities permeating the disco-synth rhythms.

"White Knuckles" is one song meant to be played over and over — it swerves from old-school R&B to power rock and back in a matter of seconds. The fantastic "Back From Kathmandu" ditches most of the fuzz for some heavy drums and a more dream-pop feel with a touch of down-home Americana. And if you're pining for an immaculately crafted pop song in OK Go's charismatic style, "I Want You So Bad I Can't Breathe" is your best best. More pensive moments such as "Last Leaf" provide respite from the bass and a little bit of personal soul-baring.

Whether they've put the treadmills behind them forever or they're just experimenting with their favorite influences, OK Go is emerging as a sophisticated rock band for nostalgic grown-ups and for club-going youngsters. "Blue Colour" sees the group, dynamic and energetic as any rockers should be, just starting to tap into its full potential. AFTON LORRAINE WOODWARD

Happy, Happy, Joy, Joy: Fox has given an early second-season renewal to breakout freshman dramedy "Glee." The show also is launching a nationwide casting search to fill new roles. The auditions will start in February and will be open to people between the ages of 16 and 26. All roles will be chosen from the video audition process, making "Glee" the first interactive musical comedy on television. (AP)

Trump says “BUY NOW!”

Secure Your Financial Future in 2010

DID YOU KNOW THAT:

- ➡ Mortgage rates are at historic lows.
- ➡ Banks are overrun with foreclosures and unloading properties to smart investors at unprecedented discounts.
- ➡ Real estate prices have hit bottom, creating a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity for you to profit.
- ➡ The window of opportunity is closing—next year could be too late!

Have you ever asked yourself...
“What would my life be like now if I had invested in real estate during the down market of the early 1990s?”

If you know someone who did buy investment properties during those days, you know that your life might be very different if you had done the same. Maybe you watched with envy as they created monthly cash flow, realized their dreams of passive income, and quit their job forever. Many of those investors are now multimillionaires.

What you may not know is that, right now—in 2010—you have a unique opportunity to do the same. Why?

Extraordinary market circumstances have created unprecedented opportunity for investors—but only those armed with the right information will know how to seize this moment.

In recovering markets like San Diego, Las Vegas, Phoenix, and Orlando, the demand for foreclosed and lower priced homes has spiked.

— Lawrence Yun, Chief Economist
National Association of Realtors

We’re witnessing the largest real estate liquidation in history. An unparalleled window of opportunity has opened, but history tells us it will not stay open forever. We’re advising people to buy—but not to buy blindly. You must have a proven game plan.

The Bust is a Boon: From California to D.C., falling home prices and cheaper mortgage rates are making dream homes possible.

— CNNMoney

Don’t miss this chance to attend a wealth-building Trump workshop that will empower you to be the one who wins in this downturn. No matter what stopped you from profiting with real estate in the past, it doesn’t have to stop you now!

This is your chance to change your financial future in 2010!

Don’t miss it!

HERE’S WHAT THESE TRUMP STUDENTS HAD TO SAY ABOUT THE FREE WORKSHOP:

“My experience was nothing less than spectacular with the Trump people. The wisdom they brought out in me and the concepts they taught me are forever bestowed inside me. I will always be most grateful and indebted to their fantastic staff.”

— Charlie D., Bullhead City, AZ

“Excellent training for a beginner like me who had no real estate experience.”

— Ramon L., Los Angeles, CA

“I have never attended a workshop that I hung on to every word, fearful that I would miss something if I left the room for a minute. This was the most engaging seminar I have attended. Thank you!”

Secret Agent Misogynist

'Archer' is a crass cartoon spy with serious girl issues

Animation

FX 10:00 As a cartoon, "Archer" is fairly interesting to look at. As a spy spoof, it's as old as "Get Smart," and as a comedy, it's a tedious exercise in network envelope-pushing. Much like "The League," it seems to be aimed at a young male audience marinated in the casual vulgarity of pornography, hip-hop and violent video games.

While "The League" portrayed women as slightly inconvenient objects of fleeting desire, "Archer" is shot through with hatred for the fairer sex.

Archer, voiced by H. Jon Benjamin, is a super-secret agent who happens to work for an agency helmed by his mother (Jessica Walter), who demeans him at every turn. Mom spends most of her time drinking and engaging in phone sex. Every other woman at the agency is a curvaceous plaything for Archer.

Archer has a strange and tense relationship with his verbally abusive mom.

The combination of Archer's harsh treatment of his co-workers and his weird Oedipal relationship with Mom pushes "Archer" into new territory, misogyny-wise. While shows like "The Big Bang Theory" are about guys who don't have girlfriends, "Archer" seems aimed at guys without girlfriends, and crippling issues, to boot.

This is hardly the only FX series to showcase a damaged protagonist. "The Shield" and "Damages" come to mind. But the two-dimensional characters on "Archer" are too one-dimensional to engage much interest.

Clearly inspired by the success of "Adult Swim," "Archer" would probably work better late in the evening, when cable networks have traditionally shopped their rougher fare to an adult audience of channel surfers. KEVIN MCDONOUGH (UNITED FEATURE SYNDICATE)

Real Housewife

"Carnie Wilson Unstapled" (8 p.m., GSN) documents the overscheduled personal life of the former pop singer and "Newlywed Game" host. Much like Tori Spelling's Oxygen series, Wilson's show accents the everyday housewife aspects of her life in a comfortable but not spectacular home. Bottom line: Carnie tries a little too hard to be just like us, when she's clearly not. For example: She has her own TV show! (K.M.)

The story has everything — human rights, censorship, America's leading brand, cyber-crime, intrigue and an unprecedentedly open statement from Google."

— PEKINGDUCK.ORG WAS SURPRISED TO SEE THE COMPANY TAKE SUCH A HARD-LINE STANCE AGAINST CHINA.

"Wow, this [was] ballsy and so awesome. That chin there really takes the cake. This is by far the best poke at the whole NBC situation with Jay Leno and Conan."

— DOOBYBRAIN.COM WAS IMPRESSED WITH JIMMY KIMMEL'S MANEUVER ON HIS LATE NIGHT TALK SHOW TUESDAY; HE DRESSED AND ACTED AS LENO FOR THE ENTIRE SHOW.

"Even in the corrupt, greedy, me-first world of college athletics, Lane Kiffin's decision to bolt Tennessee was still surprising."

— DEADSPIN.COM THOUGHT KIFFIN SHOWED LITTLE CLASS IN LEAVING TENNESSEE TO BECOME THE HEAD FOOTBALL COACH AT THE UNIVERSITY OF SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA.

Horoscope

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)

Your behavior is likely to come into question simply because it is unexpected and doesn't, perhaps, conform to the rules.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) New surroundings can provide you with energy and inspiration. Focus on doing those things that have been left undone.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) Never say never. You may find yourself immersed once more in a situation that you had sworn could be avoided no matter what.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Your duties fall into one of two categories — the routine and the unexpected. You may swing from one to the other.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Keep your body and mind fueled, and ready for a coming challenge. You're likely to get a hint of what lies just ahead.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Potential is high, but always be ready for a challenge to be mounted when you least expect it. Someone doesn't want you to win.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You may express yourself more freely than usual, without any fear that you will be misunderstood. You're feeling in top form.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Your interest in the way things were will surely influence how you approach the way things develop in the near future.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You're likely to receive instruction from someone whose expertise is widely recognized. Listen to what is said — and how it is said.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) Your interest in fair play for everyone will drive you toward a confrontation with someone who has a different attitude about things.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) Take advantage of any time you have to devote to your personal needs — even if it is very rare and very short.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)

It's a good day to revisit past events that did so much to put you where you are now. Understanding moves you forward quickly.

AILING 'Dexter' Star on Mend From Cancer

Michael C. Hall says he was diagnosed with cancer and is on the road to the successful completion of treatment. In a statement Wednesday, Hall said he was fortunate to be diagnosed with a "treatable and curable condition," Hodgkin's lymphoma, and thanked his doctors and nurses for their expertise. A spokesman said the disease is in complete remission. (AP)

Hairball to Direct Procedural Drama

Rob Zombie will make his television directorial debut on an upcoming episode of "CSI: Miami." CBS says the rocker and horror-film director will bring the Miami crime-solving team to Los Angeles in a story that involves secret tape recordings and evidence tampering. Production began Wednesday on the episode slated to air March 1. (AP)

We often put glasses and hats on our hairballs, too. Dresses 'em up a little.

PAINFUL Tila Has Totally Lost It

Casey Johnson's supposed fiancée, Tila Tequila, says she will seek custody of Johnson's 3-year-old adopted daughter, Ava. The child currently resides with Johnson's mother. "Her last wish was to have me have Ava," Tequila told "Extra." "She's not resting in peace right now. She has come to me in my dreams," Tequila said of Johnson, found dead on Jan. 4. The cause of death has yet to be determined. (EXPRESS)
